

Job Corps Trains Young People for Today's Careers

Job Corps trains bright, resourceful young people for job readiness in today's marketplace. As the nation's oldest and largest residential training program for economically disadvantaged youth ages 16 through 24, Job Corps has been training quality workers and professionals for more than 35 years.

At Job Corps, students learn more than a trade. They learn employability skills, such as the importance of teamwork, promptness, follow-through and communication. For up to a year after they graduate, Job Corps students work with a career transition specialist who helps them find housing, transportation, child care (if necessary), health care and other necessities in life. This support allows graduates to focus on what's really important: working for you.

Don't take our word for it.

"All the Job Corps students I have worked with have had a good background in the welding business from their experience at Job Corps. I look for two main things in hiring a worker: training in safety practices and basic knowledge in the use of tools. Job Corps workers fulfill both requirements. I have found a valuable source of technically skilled workers in Job Corps students in a market where construction applicants are hard to find."

- Mike McNamara

*Co-owner of Advantage Fence Company
St. Louis, Missouri*

"I couldn't be more pleased with the Job Corps students I have hired. The students of this program conduct themselves professionally and understand the meaning of hard work. They see jobs as grand opportunities that will lead them to a better life."

- Jackie E. Bippes

City Manager of Clearfield, Utah
